

McCall primary School is a K-1 school located in Northwest Cobb County. McCall signed its charter on May 10, 2004 and began its first year in August 2005. McCall operates with an emphasis on early learning.

To cope with an increased number of students over the previous two years, McCall was created to relieve overcrowding at Acworth Elementary. This change was due to being located in a rapidly developing area in the county.

McCall originated due to the split of Acworth Elementary into a primary (K-1) and intermediate (2-5) school. Although they are housed on two separate campuses, we continue to maintain regular communication with each other.

McCall Primary School was named after Dr. Moses McCall and his wife Mary Bolton McCall. Dr. McCall was one of the founding doctors of Kennestone Hospital in Marietta, and Mary McCall served as an Acworth City Councilwoman in 1955, and mayor of Acworth in 1956.
