Reading: Next week, we will be working on a variety of activities and projects to review all the standards we covered this year. At home, have your child read a fiction story. Have them infer anything about the characters. You can also ask questions about the text after they have read to test understanding.

Writing: Next week, we will be reviewing standards covered previously and incorporating writing into our reading activities and projects. To help your child at home, remind them that writing a complete and correct sentence is important, and must include correct capitalization, punctuation, and be a complete thought.

Math: Next week, we will be reviewing previously covered concepts and working on projects to extend students' understanding of all 4th grade standards. At home, please continue to encourage students to practice their multiplication facts and to review the math videos located on the Mableton website (cobk12.org/Mableton) in the "Parent Resources" section.

Science: Next week, we are going to continue to study Ecology. Students are learning about how organisms adapt to survive. You can help at home by creating a food chain using white paper strips. On each strip, write the name of a producer or a consumer. Then use tape to combine the strips into paper food chains.

Volunteers Needed
