AP Economics AP Microeconomics is the study of individual decision making for businesses and consumers. AP Macroeconomics is the study of the factors that affect a national economic system. AP Economics teaches both AP Microeconomics and AP Macroeconomics within a single semester and thus prepares you for both AP exams. Unlike other social studies courses, economics is primarily concept-based. You will be learning how to solve problems and receive little to no benefit from memorizing large quantities of information.	Naked Economics: Undressing the Dismal Science Read Charles Wheelan (New York: W. W. Norton, 2010). Please do not read the 2003 edition.	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. For each chapter, explain the basic economic concept(s) being discussed.</li> <li>2. For each concept, give an example from your life (NOT an example given by Wheelan) and experiences that reflect that concept.</li> </ol> This should result in one paragraph per chapter in the book. Do not feel that you have to reproduce the book. Each paragraph should be a quick review of what you just read after you finish a chapter with the additional extension to a modern, personal event. Grading Checklist <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Both Fall and Spring semester students must submit no later than the first Friday of Fall semester, by 8:20am, no exceptions. Late submissions will not be accepted under any circumstances.</li> <li>2. Typed, double-spaced, 12-point font (Times New Roman or Garamond ONLY)</li> <li>3. Fulfills all factors described above</li> </ol> If you have any questions, please email Mr. White at matthew.white2@cobbk12.org.
